EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Overview

If I was to describe February 2021 in a word, that word would be uncertainty. While it started simple - merely a single minded determination to fulfill the EY requirements for leave, the time so far after leave has been more confusing than anything else.

The first thing to note about February is I did fulfill my side of the deal with EY and am now embarking on 3 month leave at 30% pay. That became effective February 22nd.

Other concrete accomplishments this month include signing a venue, DJ, photographer, and videographer for the wedding meaning that most of the planning is done. It has also been a good month financially with income supplemented by day trading gains in GME and a bitcoin mining venture estimated to generate about 5,000 this year.

While this accomplishments, achieved mostly in the first 3 weeks of February, represent a productive if less inspired month than January - the last week of February was a doozy.

An opportunity to be a Financial Operations Principal landed on my desk. The opportunity would represent the equivalent of 2 major milestone promotions in terms of pay and corporate ladder being that FinOp is traditionally one level below CFO at brokerages.

I spent quite a bit of effort of the entirety of February pursuing this role ultimately to not be offered the job. While that is unfortunate, I am less bothered by the miss than by what it may represent. Namely, what am I to do after the 3 month Sabbatical?

My original conviction was to simply follow a methodology such as QLA for 3 months and figure the rest out later. That approach is nothing if not simple. However, after reaching out to professionals in the appropriate spaces, and seeking out the advice of potential board members they have to some degree picked a part the methodology itself and to a larger degree picked a part my approach.

They recommended taking the 3 months not to pursue but to decide - an exit such as can be provided by EY is a rare opportunity; MIT. Government Contracting, A Government Job, A Wall-street Job, Politics, and yes Acquisitions are all open to me. The advice from these mentors was to use the 3 months to explore that, to decide which of those options to pursue, because that decision made wisely is worth more than the 3 months of due diligence.

Then I spoke to Amy, to more spiritual friends, and to Rabbis. I also read some of a book Amy provided me. This group all suggests that the time may be best spent exploring myself. Answering questions like why do I feel the need to succeed at any of the paths mentioned above. What is driving me? They are hoping I will use the time to put down work for 3 months - to relax, to pick up a guitar, to do psycho-analytic therapy and to read the Torah. To them the goal is self acceptance as is.

So I am at war with myself. Torn between the original plan of blindly following one path, the advice of business mentors I look up to - to use the time to CHOOSE WISELY a path, and Amy and friends who recommend I just take a break and work on self acceptance.

The last week of February I was spent feeling pulled in 3 directions and therefore I made progress in none of the 3. I went from the certainty and solo drive of finishing EY requirements to complete uncertainty. As I write this, mostly through my first week of March I feel the same way.

I'm not sure what to do. Only sure that I can't spend the 3 months being pulled in multiple directions - or else I will end up doing nothing with that time.

At least it was a good month financially. Income was $14,000 and expenses only $3,000. This month follows a similar format to last with the exception that Vision and 2020 sections were removed as they are limited to January reports.

FINANCES

February 2021

February 2021 represented a $11,000 increase in net worth. Income was almost $15,000 and expenses were roughly $3,000. This considerably beats January where income was $11,000 and expenses $10,000.

The growth is mostly accounted for by the process of combining finances with Amy. Amy's paycheck represents about $5,000 of the $14,000. Because combining of assets is a process and not instantaneous this has also underrepresented expenses because Amy's income has been added while Amy's credit cards have not. I expect expenses are undervalued by about $2,000 due to this. Rent also is being paid twice in March due to timing so expenses are underrepresented by an additional 2,600 and March will be correspondingly inflated.

Adjusted for these notes - income was around $15,000, Expenses $8,000 for a net gain of $7,000. About 1/3 of income came from investments and day trading - GME has been a particular strong source of income this month as I capitalized successfully on the Wall St Bets movement.

Figures 1 and 2 show unadjusted income, expenses, and Figure 2 shows unadjusted spending by category.

All in all February was an excellent month financially and the net $7,000 gain will be beneficial as Amy and I enter a period of deflated income due to my sabbatical.

As good as February looks, March - which represents the flip-side of the aforementioned adjustments, as well as lower income from me and potentially a security deposit on an apartment is expected to look much worse financially and should be viewed in conjunction with February to get the full picture.

Productivity

February Time Management

This report will look at productivity in two categories:

1. Time Management - the amount of hours spent productively working.
2. Goal and Task Prioritization - the choices made about which activity to work on.

Time Management

From a time management stand point, time was tracked for all but 2 days in February. Figure 3 shows the time spent on the most common activities in 30 minute blocks. To see all activities please refer to the appendix. Overall February came in as very productive in terms of raw use of time, actually beating out January slightly on time management in its purest form.

PRODUCTIVITY

Goals and Task Priorities

Goals Stated In Last Report For February 2021

COMPLETE

1. Fulfill the requirements set forth by EY to begin my 3 month leave at 30% pay on February 23rd.

Partial

2. Transcribe the full Harvard Club Tapes and the entire 2012 QLA Seminar

Partial

3. Lose 10 pounds and walk 150 miles.

Partial

4. Create the video of my engagement and share

COMPLETE

5. Do weekly reports with accountability buddy

Analysis of February 2021 Priorities

The major goal in February was to complete the EY requirements and that was achieved. All other secondary goals were completed or partially completed. Additionally goals around booking for the wedding that probably should have been included are now also complete.

As mentioned previously - the last week of February has left me very unclear on the priorities for March. As such I will set only one career goal for next month: To get clear. Continuing to take steps towards 3 conflicting goals simultaneously will just leave me moving nowhere.

Nevertheless, despite a pretty dark outlook for March, February would be hard to call anything but a success - the primary mission was met. I am on paid Sabbatical from EY.

Goals For March

1. Get clear on how to spend the Sabbatical and take steps towards whatever that decision is.
2. Lose 5 pounds.

FITNESS AND SOCIAL

February Review

Measurements

	1/31/2021	2/29/2021
Weight	162.5	157.3
% Body-Fat	19.8%	19.3%
Biceps	31.5	31.75
Shoulder	115	115
Chest	99	96.5
Waist	85.5	81
Gut	92	88
Hips	98	94

February Fitness

I started the month at 162.5 pounds and 19.8% body fat and ended the month 5 pounds and a half percent body fat lower. Given that gut, waist, and hip measurements all went down, where as all muscle groups except chest stayed the same or went up - we can assume that most of the lost weight was fat. The strategies employed were short 24 hour fasts and relatively clean eating with only a couple cheat days throughout the month. March will attempt a new strategy incorporating days where as much chicken breast, lettuce, and green beans as I want are allowed - but only those foods.

February Social

Social was not a big focus in February. I went to one party celebrating the ED exams. I don't see it being a big focus in March either with more emphasis placed on getting clear on how to spend this time which is something to be determined within the self not amongst friends.

APPENDIX I

2021 Affirmations

I am happily and easily increasing my net worth by $5,000,000 or more each and every month.

I effortlessly wake up before sunrise every morning to workout, shower, shave, dress and look my best all before my competitors have opened their eyes.

I happily work each day while walking the entire time on a treadmill that lets me lose weight while building my dreams.

I am grateful but not satiated because money is coming to me unexpectedly everywhere I turn.

I am ecstatic about how easily I am attracting expert and enthusiastic board members who want to work with me and be a part of my company.

I am blown away by how easy following the QLA steps to success is for me.

I am grateful and relaxed to know I will easily find a world class chairman for my board.

I am excited to be the CEO of my own billion-dollar corporation

I am comfortable to know that I am always surrounded by high performance people.

I am excited to have such an incredible and fulfilling marriage with my wife Amy.

I am aroused and turned on by my ability to fuck Amy for as long and hard as we want to go.

I am shaking with gratitude and fulfillment because I am the man who made the dollar digital.

I am excited about how easily I am running 19-minute 5K races whenever I want

I am vibrating and shaking with adrenaline because of how easily I destroy my opponents when I fight them in the boxing ring.

I am happy to know that I am always winning my negotiations with sellers.

I am blown away by how easily I close deals and add businesses to my conglomerate.

I am pleased with how I am constantly being positioned by myself and others for political greatness and celebrity

I am proud to effortlessly remember to listen to these affirmations every morning and night and I do so with enjoyment, focus, and a smile.

I am smiling because I know how easy focusing on one thing is for me. I always see it through with no distractions until it is complete.
